The Resurrection Turns Every Ending Into a Beginning

Spring paints the world with colors we almost forgot during winter. It is God's reminder that He specializes in bringing beauty out of what looked lifeless. The resurrection of Jesus is the ultimate declaration that renewal is not only possible—it is promised. Because He lives, our failures are not final, our fears are not permanent, and our stories are not over. The same power that raised Christ from the grave is still at work, calling us into new beginnings. Step into this season with open hands and expectant hearts. New life is already breaking through.

And just as spring transforms the landscape, the resurrection transforms the landscape of our souls. Where we once saw endings, God plants beginnings. Where we felt stuck, He opened paths. This season invites us to trust that God is writing something new—something filled with grace, courage, and unexpected beauty.
