

The fourth week of May

Life Breaks Through—Even in the Quiet Soil

Before spring bursts into color, seeds rest in silence. Hidden beneath the surface, life is forming long before we see it. The resurrection reminds us that God is often working in the quiet places of our lives, preparing renewal we cannot yet see. When Christ rose, He shattered the finality of death and opened the way for continual transformation. Just as the earth cannot resist the coming of spring, our hearts cannot resist the power of His life. This season invites us to trust, to hope, and to rise with Him into a future filled with promise.

And just as seeds break open before they grow, God sometimes brings us through hidden seasons to prepare us for new life. What feels like waiting is often His work beneath the surface. Spring teaches us that nothing is wasted—not the silence, not the soil, not the struggle. In Christ, life is always on its way.
